PULPIT ECHOES.

On Sunday evening at Union Church the Rev. C. H. Hickling spoke on Ancestry and Descendants. He pointed out the great honour and privilege of having a good ancestry. The Jew had honest pride as descended from the Father of the faithful. In his seed all the world was being blessed. There are those in these days who try to trace their descent from those who came over with the Norman Conqueror and whose line has done little worthy service. But to think of an ancestry of unfaithful, holy life, who lived and prayed for the children and sought to leave the world better than they found it—this is indeed honour and privilege. "True hearts are more than coronets."

But there may be a misuse of such a privilege, either by despising it or by undue reliance upon it. The latter was the mistake made by the Jews. They leaned idly on the promises made to Abraham without deigning to co-operate with God as to make the adequate fulfilment possible. Slothful reliance on soundly good promises only aggravates the shame of treachery and failure. These are they who beside a noble forest are only a tangled cover, a mere mass of struggling briars and bushes. It is difficult to realise, in these strenuous days, that any one should be content to be in this respect like the potato plant—having the better part underground.

To the Jews Jesus pointed out a better way. "Do the works of Abraham" and thus demonstrate your descent. He obeyed the command of God to emigrate, he ordered his household for God, he by example and by prayer, sought to free his neighbours in Sodom from their damning vices. His qualities of character could not descend physically. It was for them to serve God in their day as he did in his. Surely this is the only way in which to honour the pious dead, who gave us birth. Not by praising them, trusting to their virtues and building ornate monuments at their graves; but by imitating their faith, considering the cause of their manner of life, viz. Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day and for ever.

If this is not done there is no lasting affinity between parent and child. Jesus intimated this to the Jew when he said, "If you were Abraham's children, Natural descent was obliterated by unlikeness of character and action. Natural relationships will perish unless immortalised by mutual oneness with God.

We cannot live always on the lives of our parents, however good they are or were. Only by putting a like faith and rendering a like obedience to God can we make our relationship to them enduring and blessed. If we seek from God in Christ the same eternal life which they received, if we live here unto God as they tried to live, then we are at one with them body, soul and spirit in time and eternity. Thus shall we be spared the lament of poor Harlequin Cole-ridge. He was looking at a Bible given him in youth,

PROCESSION OF THE CROSS.

The annual procession of the Cross took place at the Roman Catholic Cathedral on Sunday. Although the weather was very threatening the procession went round the Cathedral compound twice accompanied with the various congregations and banners and crosses. The most attractive feature of the procession was the figure of Our Lord, preceded by eight girls representing angels carrying the emblems of martyrdom. The numerous members of the confraternity with their purple robes, each bearing a lighted torch, was very imposing. The procession was accompanied by the band of the Sociedade Philharmonica. Having assembled inside the spacious cathedral once more the Rev. Father Sarmento, secretary to the Bishop of Macao, preached an eloquent sermon. There was a very large congregation.

HONGKONG, MONDAY, MARCH 8, 1909.

HARD TIMES IN JAPAN.

JAPANESE newspapers are not very cheerful reading nowadays when dealing with the commercial outlook and kindred subjects. At the turn of the year a general idea prevailed that the worst was over and that signs of a revival were discernible here and there.

Indeed, Baron MAMBU, the President of the Bank of Japan, speaking at the half-yearly meeting of shareholders the other day, was inclined to think that the future could be faced with confidence, but his optimistic views are evidently shared by very few. A writer in the Even big department stores in Tokyo are complaining of the lack of business and are cutting down expenses. During the war money came very freely to the working classes of Japan, the standard of comfort was raised generally and habits were contracted which it is now difficult to eradicate. With the drying-up of many of the Pactean streams set flowing by the war and the boom which followed the signing of the peace-treaty, has come a great rise in the number of the unemployed, and the misery they are suffering is said to be very acute.

The Government with the best intentions in the world cannot do much to help.

It wants every cent it can raise to keep the machine of State moving at all, and thus the "three bad taxes"—the tax on textiles, the transit tax, and the salt monopoly—which should have been abolished a year after the cessation of hostilities must continue to be levied; and despite all the ravings of the political parties and the grumbling of the countryside it seems highly probable that they have come to stay for many years yet. If things have to grow worse before they can be bettered, then it would appear that the Chuo that the turning point cannot be reached, even at the earliest, until the prospects of this year's rice harvest become discernible. And if the outlook is then unfavourable, there is nothing for it but a prolongation of the existing dulness of trade, and a deepening of the poverty-line for the lower middle classes and the great mass of the working people.

The Kobe Herald, in one of its weekly commercial summaries, was inclined to think that the gloomy view taken by the writer in the Chuo is not altogether unfounded. It points out, for instance, that after a considerable interval reports of Companies and other concerns having failed or being in difficulties have again begun to appear in the columns of the commercial press and with some frequency. Japanese papers, indeed, are generally of opinion that more failures will take place, and they say that, while the failures which took place after the collapse of the "boom" were natural and even to be welcomed, the concerns affected being mostly speculative or unsound, the undertakings which are now being overwhelmed are substantial enterprises which have struggled hard against the effects of the depression. This is regarded as a very regrettable feature of the present position. The steady fall in the value of silver, the low price which copper fetches in the market at present, and the falling-off in the yarn exports to China are factors hitting Japan badly just now. But as trade revives in the world at large, the island empire will share in the returning tide of prosperity and the experiences which she is gathering, bitter though they be, will inure to her advantage. If her present troubles result in the evolution of a higher standard of business morality throughout Japan—a consummation devoutly to be wished—then she will have cause for congratulation that she passed through cleansing fires so soon after her emergence from comparative obscurity into the position of a Great Power.
